Introduction

This guide is intended to provide practical advice and information for carers across Monmouthshire.

At some time in our lives we may have to look after a friend, relative or neighbour who needs help due to sickness, age or disability.

Over a lifetime seven out of ten women will become carers and nearly six out of ten men.

Carers can often be isolated by the nature of the caring role and may not have access to all the information they need.

We hope this guide will provide timely, practical and useful information to carers and will prove to be a valuable resource.

We have tried very hard to keep this information up to date but if you find any errors please let us know.

Telephone charges to numbers in this book

Call charges to numbers that are not local rate may vary – especially if calling from a mobile or landline. The cost of calling a phone number depends on the digits it starts with, your phone provider and whether you use a landline or a mobile phone.

Further information can be found at: www.gov.uk/call-charges

Chapter 1

Who is a Carer and what legal rights do they have?

Under the Social Services and Well-being Act (Wales) 2014, a Carer is defined as: “a person who provides or intends to provide care for an adult or disabled child.”

A person is not a Carer if they provide or intend to provide care:

- a) Under or by virtue of a contract
- b) As voluntary work

The local authority may treat a person as a Carer if the relationship between the person providing or intending to provide care and the person for whom that care is or is to be provided is such that it would be appropriate for the former to be treated as a Carers for the purposes of that function or those functions. (Social Care and Well-being Wales Act 2014).

Legal rights of carers

The Social Care and Well-being Act (Wales) 2014 repeals the majority of existing Community Care legislation and repeals and consolidates all existing Carers legislation.

There will be a duty on local health boards to submit to the Welsh Government any part of their Health and Well-being strategies which relates to carers.

The Act contains guidance for local authorities and local health boards around assessment and provision of services for carers, carers assessments, eligibility criteria, meeting carers needs, using voluntary organisations to help meet need and charging for services.

Further information on the Social Services Well-being Act (Wales) 2014 can be found at: <http://gov.wales/topics/health/socialcare/act> and www.legislation.gov.uk

Chapter 2

Monmouthshire Carers Project

The Monmouthshire Carers Project includes a number of different agencies that support carers across Monmouthshire, including social services, voluntary organisations and Health. The project works to ensure that carers:

- know where to get information and support
- have an opportunity to talk about what is important to them in their caring role and the sort of support that may be available.

The project helps carers of all ages. For more details contact the Carers Co-ordinator.

The Carers Co-ordinator

The Carers Co-ordinator is based with Gwent Association of Voluntary Organisations (GAVO) and works closely with the other members of the team. The Carers Co-ordinator:

- maintains a register of carers in Monmouthshire
- produces a regular newsletter which is sent to all carers who are registered with the carers team
- arranges training for carers on a range of issues (see Chapter 11)
- arranges events for Carers Week and Carers Rights Day
- co-ordinates discount for carers at Monmouthshire leisure centres.

You can register with the carers team by filling in the form at the start of this book and sending it to the carers co-ordinator.

Carers Support and Information Officers

There are Carers Support and Information Officers based with the Integrated Service Teams and Children's Services within Monmouthshire.

They carry out carers assessments, and it is usual for them to arrange to carry these out at a carer's home, but if this is not convenient they can arrange to meet somewhere else. The purpose of the visit is not to give carers a test or assess what they are doing – but to have a conversation about the caring role, including what sort of support a carer may need. (See Chapter 3 Carers Assessment – what is it? How could it help you?)

Some of the other things that Carers Support and Information Officers are involved with include:

- Linking to Health to promote practical care and support for carers
- Providing telephone advice to carers and professionals
- Researching new developments for carers
- Promoting the work of the Carers Project
- Liaising with GP surgeries to ensure that carers have access to up to date information.

Carers Trust South East Wales – Young Carers Project Carers Trust South East Wales – Young Carers Project

Young carers are children and young people under 18 who often take on practical and/or emotional caring responsibilities that would normally be expected of an adult.

Some of the ways young people care for someone are:

- Staying in the house a lot to be there for them
- Helping them to get up, get washed or dressed, or helping with toileting
- Doing lots of the household chores like shopping, cleaning and cooking
- Looking after younger brothers and sisters
- Providing emotional support or a shoulder to cry on.

The young carers project supports young carers to help them achieve their potential and manage their caring role.

This is done through a team around the family approach so young carers can access the right support at the right time. The young carers project supports young carers by providing 1–1 support, group work, integration into mainstream youth activities, signposting, school liaison and raising the profile of and advocating for and behalf of young carers.

If you know of someone who is a young carer you can help by referring them to the young carers project team by telephoning the numbers below and asking for a referral form. Anyone can refer a young carer to the young carers project; the only conditions are that they must be a young carer and must have consent from the parent or guardian of the young carer you are referring.

Carers Emergency Card

The carer's emergency card alerts people to the fact that you are a carer and someone is depending on you if you should be involved in an accident. It has space on the reverse for two contacts (people who could help out in an emergency). The name and address of the person you care for should not be written on the card as this could leave them vulnerable. Cards are available from Carers Support and Information Officers and from GP surgeries.

Chapter 3

Carers Assessment – What is it?

How could it help you?

Any carer is entitled to an assessment, including carers of children with disabilities or long term illness and young carers under the age of 18. It is an opportunity to discuss the sort of support you may need in your caring role. Even if the person you care for has refused an assessment or support, you can still have one.

There is no minimum or maximum number of hours to being a carer. Your carers assessment is an opportunity to have a discussion about things that may be able to make caring easier for you.

The carers assessment will take place somewhere that is convenient for you, in your home, the home of the person you care for, or somewhere else if you prefer. The assessment will be carried out by a social worker or a Carers Support and Information Officer.

We recognise that carers have different needs. Whoever carries out the assessment will aim to work with you and will try to arrange appropriate support to suit your individual needs as a carer. A carers assessment is an opportunity to consider your situation and ask any questions that you may have.

We hope to offer advice or inform you about agencies which offer help and support for carers. Before the visit it may be a good idea to think about your caring role and how it impacts on your life, including:

- Your health (physical and mental)
- Your work
- Your day to day life
- Your feelings
- Your leisure needs
- Your relationships with others
- Finances
- Maintaining your own identity.

To ask for a carers assessment contact the Integrated Service Team for your area.

Social Services

Social services have principles that govern the way they work, including:

- We will take an outcome focussed approach to future planning (long term and short term) with families and individuals to meet their aspirations and goals
- We will have honest and transparent conversations with all people.

Charging for Care and Support

Monmouthshire County Council's charging policy applies to most care and support for the person you care for, although some are available free of charge. Your Hospital Discharge Team will be able to tell you more based on your individual circumstances. Social Services has two leaflets explaining the charges: "Paying for your Care and Support" and "Considering a Care Home", available from your Social Services Office.

Direct Payments

You may be eligible for support, if, for example, you are an adult (over 18) who has:

- A short or long term health condition
- A physical disability
- A learning disability
- Mental health needs
- An autistic spectrum condition
- Or if you are a carer or parent carer.

What is a Direct Payment?

If you qualify for support you may be eligible to receive money from Social Services called a Direct Payment to purchase your own support privately, or to purchase your own equipment.

This scheme is available to adults and children, both cared for and carers.

The Direct Payment Scheme is designed to give you choice and control and to help you manage your life as independently as possible.

If you need support or equipment to enable you to live independently, you have three options:

- To receive support or equipment directly from Social Services

- To receive a budget through a Direct Payment to purchase the type of support you need privately
- Or a combination of the two.

You may also be able to use a Direct Payment for short periods of respite or short breaks, if agreed by Social Services as part of the support you need.

For further information on how Direct Payments work, a “Direct Payment” leaflet is available from your local Social Services office.

The service will not be able to help if the situation can wait until the next working day without risk of harm.

Careline

Careline is a service that helps people live safely and independently in their own homes. Careline works by providing sensors in a person's home, and if a sensor is activated trained operators will take the most appropriate action. This could mean contacting a family member, neighbour, doctor or the emergency services. The service operates 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

As well as the personal trigger pendant or wrist alarm, Careline can provide protection from falls, floods, carbon monoxide, intruders, bogus callers and fire.

The technology offers a wide range of discreet, intelligent sensors to minimise risk to personal health and the home environment. For example, property exit sensors provide early warning that the service user has left their home and not returned within a certain time. This can be particularly reassuring for carers of people with dementia. Sensors can be timed to individual requirements.

There is an installation fee and weekly charge fee for the standard service. There are additional charges for extra sensors.

Our Supporting People Programme provides housing-related support to help vulnerable people live as independently as possible. This could be in people's own homes or in hostels, sheltered housing, or other specialist supported housing.

There are many reasons why it can sometimes be difficult to find accommodation, or why it can be difficult to keep the accommodation you are already in. You may need support because you have a disability, you could be homeless or have a drug problem.

Website: www.monmouthshire.gov.uk/home/planning-and-housing/housing

A support worker will talk through your problems and together you will agree a support plan.

Continuing NHS Healthcare

Continuing NHS Healthcare (also known as CHC) is the name given to a package of services which is arranged and funded solely by the NHS for those people who have been assessed as having a primary health need (this is explained later). An individual can receive CHC in any setting including their own home or in a care home. In someone's own home, this means that the NHS will pay for healthcare (for example, services from a community nurse or specialist therapist) and social care, but this does not include the costs of food, accommodation or general household support. In a care home, the NHS pays for the care home fees, including board and accommodation.

If assessments by a range of professionals show that an individual's primary need is a health need, they should be eligible for CHC. The primary health need will be assessed by looking at all of the individual's care needs considering four key areas:

Nature – this describes the needs and types and effect of needs on the individual and the type of help required to manage the needs

Intensity – this describes one or more needs which may be so severe as to require a degree of on-going care

Complexity – This describes how symptoms interact, making them difficult to manage and control, requiring increased skill to monitor the symptoms, treat the condition and/or manage the care

Unpredictability – this describes the degree to which someone's needs fluctuate and how difficult those needs are to manage. It also describes the level of risk to an individual's health if the right care isn't provided.

More information about the CHC process can be found in the Welsh Governments Continuing NHS Healthcare for Adults in Wales, Public Information Leaflet which you can obtain from Aneurin Bevan University Health Board.

If you wish your relative to be considered for CHC eligibility you can ask for this through:

- Your relative's GP
- The District Nurse
- Hospital staff (if the person is in hospital)

If you would like to speak to someone about CHC, you can contact the Complex Care Team

Tel: 01495 332302

Email: complexcare@wales.nhs.uk

Funded Nursing Care

Local authorities cannot provide clinical services because the NHS is responsible for any care that must be provided by a registered nurse. For people in care homes with nursing, registered nurses are usually employed by the care home itself and the NHS make a payment to cover the costs of providing the nursing care for those who need it.

Registered nursing can involve many different aspects of care. Typically those with a need for registered nursing care will receive some of the following:

- Supervision or monitoring of nursing needs
- Planning the care, reviewing an individual's needs and making changes to the care plan
- Identifying potential health problems and dealing with them for example, by referring to other healthcare professionals such as doctors or therapists
- Monitoring an individual's medication.

An individual should receive Funded Nursing Care if:

- They live in a care home with nursing and they are not eligible for CHC but have been assessed as requiring the services of a registered nurse

- They are not receiving registered nursing care in any other way, for example, from district nurses.

Help from your GP

GP Registration scheme for carers

Most people who have a caring role will turn to their GP for information and support. There are a number of advantages to doing this:

- It alerts your GP to the fact that you are looking after someone. Caring can sometimes affect the health of a carer – for example, lifting someone regularly can cause back problems. Stress related problems are common among carers. If your GP knows that you are a carer it can make it easier for you to talk to him/her about how your caring role is affecting you
- Your GP can include you when sending out information relating to carers – for example, carers are entitled to a free flu jab so can be included in mail-outs about the flu jab campaign.

Carer registration forms can be obtained from the reception desk of your local surgery. After registering as a carer there is a second form that you and the person you care for can fill in to help with information sharing. This gives permission to the GP to share information about medication or medical conditions with the carer, if the person being cared for agrees to this. More information is available from reception at your GP surgery.

The Community Nursing Service

Community Nurses provide nursing care and advice to those patients in their own home who are unable to visit the practice nurse. The aim is to maximise and maintain the patient's independence as well as teaching and supporting carers. The nurse's skills include wound care, continence management, the assessment and management of long term disease and conditions and the care of people who are terminally ill.

Ask about Community Nurses at your local G.P. practice.

Hospital Discharge

The hospital wards are very often the point where you will become aware that a relative or friend will need care when they come home, or maybe you have been looking after a relative or friend before they were admitted to hospital.

The Hospital Discharge Team is there to help people to come home safely and with the appropriate support. Usually, you will meet with someone from the Hospital Discharge Team because ward staff have contacted them for you. When you visit the ward, you can ask the ward staff to refer the person you are caring for to the Hospital Discharge Team.

The Hospital Discharge Team works closely with nurses, staff, doctors, occupational therapists, physiotherapists, speech and language therapists and dieticians. They and the Integrated Care Teams in the community will gather as much information as possible so as to have a clear picture of the help that is needed. This is so that your relative/friend and you as a carer receive the best possible support after leaving hospital.

The Hospital Discharge Team can guide you through the procedures both before and after someone is discharged from hospital. The Team also stays involved after someone comes home to make sure that your relative/friend, and you as a carer are safe and supported. The Team may also recommend that you have a carer's assessment. Ask a member of staff at the hospital to contact the Hospital Discharge Team for you, or you can contact your local Social Services office.

Work, Leisure and Volunteering

When you are looking after someone else it can be easy to lose your own identity and shelve your own interests and plans.

You may not feel that you have the time, opportunity or even the motivation to pursue other interests. However, keeping your outside interests can both broaden your horizons now and make transition from full-time caring to employment easier in the future if or when your caring role comes to an end.

Your work, educational and leisure needs must be taken into account in a carer's assessment.

Leisure and Education

Community Education

In Monmouthshire, over 150 educational courses are held regularly.

Details of the courses available are published annually in July by Monmouthshire County Council's Department of Lifelong Learning and Leisure. Some of the courses offered are free. Depending on your income, you may be able to claim back 25%–50% of your course fees.

Courses can be booked at your local Community Education centre.

Chapter 9

Legal Matters

Many vulnerable people and their carers can benefit from legal advice. This can be particularly important when the person you care for, due to their health, finds it difficult to manage their everyday routines. Managing finances, paying for care and making financial decisions can become difficult and stressful, and in some cases impossible. Below are contact details for some organisations that specialise in providing advice and information to support you in your caring role.

Age Cymru Gwent

Age Cymru Gwent has a central information service which produces fact sheets on a range of subjects including legal matters. You can ring the freephone number or get the sheets from the Age UK website.

Tel: 01633 240195 / 0800 169 2081

Website: www.ageuk.org.uk/cymru/gwent/

Wills, Estate Planning and Tax Planning

Making a will is one of the most important things that you will do. It ensures that after your death your property and other assets will pass on to relatives, friends and charities you wish to nominate and not pass under intestacy, where other relatives or organisations may be entitled to a share. If you or the person you care for do not make a will, they your/their next of kin will be the only person automatically entitled to administer your/their estate.

This could be difficult if the administrator is unable to do this for health and wellbeing reasons, for example, if they are frail or lack mental capacity.

You can find advice about making a will at your local Citizen's Advice Bureau.

If the person you are caring for does not make a will and you as a carer do not think that you have been provided for, you may be able to make a claim under the 1975 Provision for Families and Dependents Act, for reasonable financial provision. For further information about this contact your solicitor or your local Citizens Advice Bureau.

Mental Capacity Act 2005

Mental Capacity is the ability of a person to make decisions for him/herself. This means that the person is able to:

- understand information given to him/her about particular issues;
- retain that information long enough to be able to make a decision;
- weigh up the information available to make a decision;
- communicate that decision. This could be by any possible means, such as talking, writing, using sign language or even simple muscle movement such as blinking an eye or squeezing a hand.

The Mental Capacity Act 2005 aims to protect people who cannot make decisions for themselves due, perhaps, to a learning disability or a mental health condition, for example Alzheimer's disease or for any other reason such as a physical condition or illness affecting how their mind works. It also gives clear guidelines for carers and professionals about who can take decisions in these situations.

There are five principles that need to be followed by anyone who is supporting or working with a person who lacks capacity:

- every adult has the right to make decisions for themselves, unless it is shown that they are unable to make them;
- people should be supported as much as possible to enable them to make their own decisions before concluding that they cannot make them;
- people may make decisions even though such decisions may appear unwise;
- decisions taken on behalf of people lacking capacity must be in their best interests;
- the rights and freedom of people who lack capacity must not be restricted unnecessarily.

Acting in the Best Interests of the Person for Whom You Care

The Act provides a checklist of factors that must be considered in deciding what is in the best interests of a person lacking capacity. Even when you are not the 'best interests' decision-maker for your relative or friend, each of you will be involved as much as possible in making decisions. He/she can also put his/her wishes and feelings into a written statement, which the person making the decision must consider.

Advance Decision to Refuse Treatment

Before the Mental Capacity Act was introduced, people were already able to make advance decisions, previously known as 'living wills'.

The Act introduces a number of rules regarding form and content that must be followed when making an advance decision for them to be valid and applicable. If the person you care for has already made an advance decision, it must comply with the new rules to be valid and applicable, particularly if it deals with life-sustaining treatment.

Power of Attorney

You might need someone to make decisions for you or act on your behalf on a temporary or permanent basis. For that reason there are two types of power of attorney – ordinary or lasting. Ordinary power of attorney – this is when you give someone else full access to make decisions and take action concerning your finances while you still have mental capacity.

Lasting Power of Attorney – A lasting power of attorney (LPA) allows you to give someone you trust the legal authority to make decisions on your behalf if you lack mental capacity at some time in the future or no longer wish to make decisions for yourself. There are 2 LPA's

- property and financial affairs
- personal welfare.

An LPA must be registered before use.

Enduring power of attorney (EPA) has been replaced by lasting power of attorney (LPA and it only covers decisions about your property and financial affairs). However, if you made and signed an EPA before 1 October 2007, it's still valid.

You might already be using the EPA without having registered it, so that someone can act on your behalf which is fine, until you become unable to make your own decisions relating to financial and property matters. At this point the EPA must be registered before your attorney can take any further action on your behalf and it is the responsibility of your attorney to register the EPA with the Office of the Public Guardian.

For more information guides on the Mental Capacity Act 2005 contact the Mental Health team in your area (see Chapter 14).

Health Matters

Looking After Yourself

Most of us know, more or less, what we should be doing to look after ourselves. It's easy to say but harder to do.

As a carer you need the same things as everyone else however you may find it more difficult to find the time to remember to care for yourself.

Everyone needs:

- good food – including plenty of fresh fruit and vegetables
- exercise, physical activity and mental stimulation
- enough sleep – usually about 7 hours each night
- treatment or help when you are ill
- friends, a loving relationship or someone to talk to that you can trust
- relaxation and some time for yourself.

You may become so tied up with looking after someone else that you can neglect your own physical and emotional health. It is important for you to remember your own well-being and keep yourself as well as possible.

It may help to remember that your well-being is important to the person you care for as well as to you, because they are depending on you.

Some practical ways to look after yourself

Your GP may be willing to refer you to the exercise referral scheme to help you gently back into an exercise programme. Further information can be found on the link below, or speak to your GP.

Website: www.monmouthshire.gov.uk/leisure/gp-referral-scheme

Many find it helpful to talk to other people who have a caring role.

Carers groups can be a source of support and local information.

Within Monmouthshire there are a number of carers groups – either for people caring for someone with a specific condition – and other generic carers groups.

Looking after your Back

Carers often provide assistance with manual handling, which can mean lifting someone. Lifting can range from slight support to lifting a person's full body weight. Current guidance shows that even light to medium lifting tasks, which are carried out regularly, can lead to serious muscular or back problems.

If you do a lot of lifting or carrying because of your caring role, you need to protect your back or you may damage it. If you already have backache or problems with your back, it is important to talk to your doctor or a physiotherapist about this. They will be able to give you advice on back care that meets your particular needs.

Good posture is important. Stand, sit and walk tall. When lifting, bend from the knees, not at the waist, when you pick things up. Being overweight can put extra strain on your back.

An Occupational Therapist will be able to tell you if you need any equipment to help with lifting. You can have a Home Occupational Therapy assessment if the person you care for is a permanent resident of Monmouthshire. There will be no charge for an assessment, or for the loan of any equipment that you may be provided with.

If adaptations to your home are recommended as a solution to your difficulties, the occupational therapist will discuss the options available to you. To ask for an Occupational Therapy assessment you can contact your local Integrated Service Team duty line (see Chapter 4). A free booklet and CD – “A Carers Guide to safer moving and handling of people” is available from the Carers Team.

Exhaustion

Exhaustion is often the trigger for negative feelings which will manifest themselves in many different ways. Tiredness related to your caring role and the lack of quality sleep can have a detrimental effect and can lead to feelings of anger and resentment. You should try to ensure that you do not do more work than you really need to.

Try to make some time to do things that you want to do, whether it is watching a favourite television programme, reading a book or pursuing a hobby. A carer's assessment must take into account your work and leisure needs.

Carers and Stress

Stress has been described as an occupational hazard by carers. While a certain amount of stress is normal – even good for us – excessive amounts can make us ill.

Do not view being stressed as a failure. Excessive stress can be the result of a demanding role.

Carers report many reasons for feeling stressed. Maybe you can identify with some of these:

- feeling “trapped” or resentment at “what might have been or could be” if things were different;
- feeling overwhelmed at being responsible for someone else's welfare;
- lack of sleep or sleep that is broken regularly;
- physical problems from activities like lifting;
- disagreements with the person being cared for or other family members – for instance, when to call in a medical professional;
- coping with mood swings and irrational behaviour; can be draining emotionally;
- having to limit social activities because of caring duties;
- having little time to yourself;
- trying to care for someone whilst balancing other responsibilities such as work or family;
- feeling that your relationship with the person you care for is under strain or changed because you are now caring for them.

Coping with Stress and your Feelings

Firstly – you are not alone! Whatever situation you are in there are professionals available for you to talk to about how you are feeling.

Speak to your G.P., Social Worker, Carers Support Officer. It might help if you write down beforehand how you are feeling and how your caring role is affecting you.

You could also speak to a sympathetic family member, friend or someone you feel comfortable speaking to.

Don't assume that other people know how you feel. Family members, friends, colleagues – even professionals may assume that you are coping because you have not said otherwise.

There are some practical ways that may help when coping with stress including:

- remember why you are caring. Most people begin caring because they feel they can offer dignity, support and care to a loved one in surroundings they are comfortable in. This is a very big achievement
- value yourself and what you are doing. Think about the difference you are making to the person you are looking after
- organise your time. Prioritise what you do – cut out non-important tasks or delegate them to someone else if you can
- Don't be afraid to ask for help; and don't be afraid to accept help either
- make time for your own needs. Ask for respite so that you can have time to do some of the things you enjoy and keep your interests alive
- join a support Group. Talking to others in similar situations and sharing solutions can be a very positive experience
- learn relaxation techniques. There are a range of books, CD's and classes available with a wealth of information and support that cater for all tastes
- learn to concentrate on one thing at a time – you are only human;
- feel empowered by learning and obtaining information that will help you in your caring role. Knowledge will help you feel more in control of the situation

- be realistic. For example – you may have promised that the person you look after would never go into a care home
- recognise that situations change – you are human like everyone else and no one knows how stressful a situation will be until you are coping with it
- look after your health. If your caring role is making you ill it will affect the care you can give to someone else
- exercise is a good way to re-energise your batteries. Walking is a great free exercise.

A free booklet – “Say I’m Fine and Mean It!” – about looking after yourself when you are caring for someone, is available from the Carers Team.

Recognising When Things Go Wrong

Sometimes it can be hard to notice when things start to go wrong. If you are busy caring for someone else it may take you a while to realise that you are no longer coping or are beginning to get ill.

If you find that you have several of the following symptoms together or for any length of time, you may need to do more to look after yourself, or to get some help:

- frequent headaches;
- back, neck or shoulder pain;
- stomach pains;
- loss of appetite, or increased appetite;
- catching colds, ‘flu or other illness regularly;
- problems with sleeping;
- depression, anxiety, worry or feelings of despair;
- mood swings, irritability;
- being more accident prone or clumsy than usual;
- being hit or hurt by someone else or hurting yourself.

Safeguarding you and the person you care for

Everyone has the right to have their human dignity respected and live their life free from abuse and neglect – including carers and the person(s) they care for.

Local Authorities, police, the health board, regulators and other public services work together and are committed to ensuring that vulnerable people are protected from abuse and neglect, and will take immediate action where necessary, to keep vulnerable people safe from harm.

Chapter 12

Taking a break from your caring role

You may need a break from caring for all sorts of reasons. It may be to go shopping, to enable you to continue to work, to attend school and/or to pursue an interest or activity, to attend a family event or simply to have time to yourself and recharge your batteries.

Accepting help can provide both practical and emotional support and in many cases the person you are caring for will also benefit from seeing a new face.

It is not reasonable for anyone to expect you to be a carer without help, whatever your situation.

Taking a break is usually known as 'respite care'. Respite care can be flexible and tailor made to meet your needs as a carer and the needs of the person you care for. It may be regular or occasional help, it may be one hour a day, one day a week or one day a year at a time to suit yourself – you can request help to suit your individual need.

Respite Care can be arranged in many different ways. The person you care for can receive help in their own home, at a day centre, or in a residential or nursing home.

You can talk to the social worker for the person you are caring for to ask about this, or contact your local Integrated Services Team, Community Learning Disability Team or Community Mental Health Team. You can also contact a care agency directly yourself. Carers Trust South East Wales and Age Cymru Gwent Respite services provide respite services in Monmouthshire.

Caring for someone with a mental health problem, or who misuses alcohol or drugs

The term mental illness covers a range of different issues. This can include a whole range from feelings and behaviours, including depression and self-harm.

Mental ill health can be experienced by anyone – around 1 in 4 people will experience some form of mental health issue at some point in their lifetime. Most people with mental health problems are treated by their GP. In some cases the GP may refer the person on to the new 'Primary Care Mental Health Services'. People with more serious mental health problems may be referred to specialist Community Mental Health Teams.

People with mental health issues can feel afraid and alone – afraid that no-one will understand them and that what they are feeling is unusual or out of the ordinary. They may feel embarrassed or guilty about what they are feeling.

When you are caring for someone who has a mental health problem you can also feel frightened and unsure of the best thing to do, or of what help and support is available for the person you look after and themselves. If you are a carer of someone with a mental illness you are entitled to a carers assessment.

Chapter 17

When a caring role comes to an end and life after a caring role

Looking after Someone with a Terminal Illness

Discovering that a relative/friend is terminally ill can unleash a wide range of emotions for them and you, from fear to anger and confusion. Feeling isolated can be a problem, as many people don't know how to react to your new situation and may seem to distance themselves. You may not know how to speak to the person you are caring for about their illness and the way you both feel about it.

There is no right or wrong way to react – life and the expectations you both had of it have changed and you will both be adjusting to your new circumstances.

Palliative care is the active holistic care of someone with an advanced progressive illness. The aim of palliative care is the achievement of the best quality of life for patients and their families.

It focuses on the management of pain and other symptoms and meeting the psychological, social and spiritual support needs.

Palliative care can be given in a hospice a nursing/residential home, in a hospital or at home. Indeed, the majority of people spend the last years of their lives at home. The role of carers therefore is very important within palliative care.

The most important thing to remember is that you do not have to cope alone. It may help if you can see your role as helping someone to live with an illness rather than dying from it.

Who can Help?

There are a number of support groups for people who are caring. These groups offer an opportunity for you to meet others who are coping in a similar circumstances and can be the source of very useful information.

When Caring comes to an end

There are different reasons why your caring role may come to an end. Maybe a child with a disability has become more independent as an adult and moved away, leaving you with an ‘empty nest’ and wondering “What happens now?”

The person you care for may have died, or may have moved into a care home.

Any of these changes can cause a wide range of emotions, including feelings of loss and loneliness. There may be many practical concerns about finances and employment. Some report feelings of extreme exhaustion at the end of a caring role. You may not want to move on for a while, perhaps needing to rest and recuperate. It is important to give yourself time to readjust to your new circumstances. People are all different and you may react differently to your new situation to a friend who has faced a similar event in the past. You are not alone. When you are ready you will find that there are people and organisations that can support you through the changes you are facing.

Talking to Someone

Many carers have felt the need to talk with someone who can offer support and advice at this time. Some have found it useful to talk with a close friend or relative about how they are feeling. Your G.P. can offer support or refer you to counselling services.

Nursing staff, social workers or a minister of religion may be able to offer you comfort and advice. You can also contact the Monmouthshire Carer's Project for advice and information about available support.

Some organisations that you had contact with when you were a carer, such as Carers Trust or Age Concern may be able to offer some support to help you adjust to your new circumstances.

Some carers who have attended a carers group find continued support there when the caring role ends. Many find these groups an excellent way of both getting support and advice and an opportunity to make new friends.

You can ask for the booklet – “Life After Caring” from Monmouthshire Carers Project.

Making sure your views are heard – (how to make a complaint or give a compliment to an organisation)

If you are not happy with the service you are receiving from any organisation, you are entitled to complain; or you may want to give a compliment to them if they have provided you with a particularly good service. All agencies have a complaints procedure which you are entitled to see.

It is better to try and sort out a problem as soon as it arises, even if it is a minor concern, as it can then be resolved quickly. Sometimes complaints are more complex and take longer to be fully sorted out.

To Make a Complaint or Give a Compliment to Monmouthshire Social Services
